Mr. WILKES's Addreſs to the Livery of London.

London, Monday, March 14.

GENTLEMEN,

I Cannot expreſs the Joy of my Heart at the noble and generous Manner, in which you have ſhewn your Acceptance of the humble Tender of my Services. So honourable a Teſtimony of Eſteem from my Fellow Citizens, has made the deepeſt Impreſſion on me. My future Life will beſt prove the Sincerity and Warmth of my Gratitude. It ſhall paſs in every Endeavour to promote the Intereſts of this Great City, and in a ſteady Attention to preſerve our excellent Conſtitution, and the Cauſe of Liberty, in which we are all embarked.

I hope to have the Honour of paying my perſonal Reſpects to you, Gentlemen, on Wedneſday next, at our Guildhall, and I beg your Support and early Attendance.

I am, with the trueſt Regard,

GENTLEMEN,

Your moſt obliged,

and obedient humble Servant,

JOHN WILKES.
